Chronicle Graphics attains Microsoft Certified Partner status

Accomplishment speaks to enterprise-readiness of project management tools.

CENTENNIAL, COLO – July 21, 2010 – Chronicle Graphics, creator of the OnePager Pro, OnePager Express, and TimeArrow project management software suites, announced today that it has become a Microsoft Certified Partner for the 2010-2011 year. Chronicle Graphics has been a registered member of the Microsoft Partner Program since 2006.

In order to qualify as a Microsoft Certified Partner, Chronicle Graphics had to subject its products to rigorous third party vulnerability testing. Microsoft also interviewed Chronicle Graphics' clients to understand how they use and benefit from the company's cutting-edge project management software.

“Attaining Microsoft Certified Partner status is a significant accomplishment for our product development and client services teams,” said Jim Black, CEO and founder of Chronicle Graphics. “Corporate IT departments and PMOs will appreciate this accomplishment as they continue to evaluate our products and standardize their organizations on Chronicle Graphics technology.”

This new distinction also underscores the value that Chronicle Graphics technology adds on top of the existing Microsoft Office tools that project managers and schedulers are using today. “By incorporating Chronicle Graphics products into the enterprise PMO, organizations can take the project data that they have already created in Microsoft Office and take it to new lengths, increasing understanding, accountability, and credibility,” Black added.
